First edition. A trifle foxed else fine in very good or dustwrapper with a modest creased tear and corresponding foxing on the flaps. In part autobiographical novel by a Muhlenberg College graduate living in New Jersey, about a man living blissfully-in-sin, to the shock of his Amish neighbors. The local preacher attempts to lure him back into the flock, which allows the protagonist to pontificate about religion and politics, at which point the novel veers into fantasy when he and his bride discover an underwater utopia. Self-published by a vanity press. OCLC locates but two copies. [BTC#256509]
