Charlotte Zolotow

The Charlotte Zolotow Papers

New York: [circa 1930-2013]

An important, lifelong archive of papers belonging to Charlotte Zolotow, editor and publisher at Harper's celebrated children's books department, and acclaimed author of over 65 children's books. The collection documents Zolotow's more than 50-year career as well as her family life, covering the period from when she began working at Harper & Brothers as stenographer and then an assistant to Ursula Nordstrom, the renowned director of Harper's children's books department, and including the entirety of her prolific literary career as editor, author, and publisher with her own imprint at Harper's: Charlotte Zolotow Books. She is also notable for being one of the first Jewish women in America to make a major mark in the New York publishing world, eventually becoming Harper's vice-president and associate publisher of the Harper Junior publishing division in 1976.

The archive contains Zolotow's personal and professional correspondence, working drafts, manuscripts, and publisher's galley proofs of her published and unpublished children's books and other writings (prose and poetry); and various other related materials, including photographs and slides, and original artworks from several illustrators with whom she worked. The archive consists of approximately 40 linear feet of materials, of which most is housed in 30 Bankers boxes (filed into folders, large envelopes, and various letter boxes), and including an additional large box and portfolio of artworks. Where possible Zolotow's ordering of the material has been retained.

Zolotow influence can still be felt today in children's literature. She is credited for her contributions to the Children's Liberation Movement which believed the rights and emotional concerns of children be recognized and treated as the equal of adults. Her books, both those she edited and those she authored, were among the first to address topics such as gender roles, homosexuality, single-parent homes, the emotional impact of the death of a family member, and later AIDS. Each told with a level of sincerity and sensitivity not associated with children's literature up until that time.

Among the highlights are over 100 unpublished letters from Nordstrom to Zolotow that discuss Harper business, including thoughts on authors and illustrators, as well as revealing details about her private life, including Nordstrom's partner Mary Griffin; several rare (and likely unpublished) photographs of the notoriously camera-shy Nordstrom from her estate, including one of her as a young woman, along with the original Harper's publicity photo from Nordstrom's own archive.

Also included are two unpublished dummies for books authored by Zolotow: one with original artwork by Louise Fitzhugh (of Harriet the Spy fame) for the book My Friend John (which was later published with illustrations by Ben Shecter); the other with original illustrations by Mary Rodgers (of Freaky Friday fame) for the book Mr. Rabbit and the Lovely Present (which was later published with illustrations by Maurice Sendak, and which was a Caldecott Honor Book).

Also present a rare page proof of *Where the Wild Things Are, considered by many the most important American children's book; a handmade greeting card from Eric Carle containing a handmade rubber stamp; and an original painting by French mime Marcel Marceau with whom Zolotow had a romantic affair.

However, of greatest interest is the wealth of personal correspondence and biographical writings, including the manuscript of her unpublished autobiography The Shaded Porch. The material reveals the active but often guarded inner life of Zolotow, a modern woman of the '40s, '50s, and '60s striving in the then conflicting pursuits of homemaker and professional author. Her writings, often composed in half-filled diaries, on loose sheets, and scraps of paper, record childhood remembrances, daily anecdotes, worries of the day, and bittersweet memories of married life and early motherhood raising her two children, the inspiration for many of her stories. The writings paint a picture of a woman filled with equal parts doubt and ambition, sometimes in the shadow of her husband Maurice Zolotow, a highly successful professional entertainment writer. Also present are approximately 300 letters from Maurice Zolotow; and approximately 800 letters from Julius H. Jacobs, her married brother-in-law, with whom she carried on a long-standing affair after her divorce from Maurice.

Zolotow was born in Norfolk, Virginia in 1915, to Louis J. Shapiro, an attorney, and Ella Bernstein Shapiro, a forthright activist for the poor and underprivileged who marched for women's suffrage. Zolotow attended the University of Wisconsin in Madison, where she studied writing under Helen C. White (along with fellow student and future husband, Maurice Zolotow). It was White who taught her "how to think, not what to think." After joining Harper's in the late 1930s she became editorial assistant to Nordstrom, the editor of such classic children's books as Goodnight Moon, Charlotte's Web, Harriet the Spy, The Giving Tree, and Where the Wild Things Are, who mentored Zolotow and helped her realize her first published work, The Park Book, published in 1944 with illustrations by H.A. Rey (co-creator of Curious George).

Zolotow and Nordstrom became lifelong friends and worked separately or together in partnership with many of the most important authors and illustrators of the 20th Century including Sendak, Fitzhugh, Rodgers, Margaret Wise Brown, Leonard Weisgard, Margaret and H.A. Rey, Garth Williams, Shel Silverstein, William Pène du Bois, Hilary Knight, Jean Craighead George, Arnold Lobel, Meindert DeJong, and many others. She and Nordstrom were celebrated for exploring new themes and cultivating their existing circle of writers and illustrators, as well as seeking out new talent, some outside the children's book field, such as Ruth Gordon, Alan Arkin, Barbara Dana, and Nathaniel Benchley.

In addition to her role as editor and publisher, Zolotow wrote over 65 books, mostly picture books for children, with illustrations created by many of the best illustrators of the day, such as Rey and Sendak, who won a Caldecott Honor for his work on Zolotow's, Mr. Rabbit and the Lovely Present (1962). Many of her books were critically acclaimed for their frank depictions of the emotions of young children, such as William's Doll (1972), a story of a boy who wants a doll despite objections from adults. The story was featured in the record album and book, Free to Be... You and Me, a project of the Ms. Foundation for Women, and later adapted as an ABC Afterschool Special. Others include A Father Like That (1971), about the child of a single mother who imagines what the perfect version of his father would be like; and My Grandson Lew (1974), a book about death told through a child's memory of his deceased grandfather.

Harper honored Zolotow with her own imprint in 1981: Charlotte Zolotow Books, designated with a distinctive tulip design: "This new imprint will consist of books by authors with whom I have already been working at Harper Junior Books, as well as any new writers whose work has integrity of purpose, beauty of language, and an out-of-ordinary look at ordinary things – humor and something to make a child feel, think, and enjoy reading the book." The imprint published more than one hundred books for children and young adults during its 12 years. Among the many acclaimed authors she published under her imprints are Kerr, Laurence Yep, Paul Fleischman, Francesca Lia Block, Lynne Reid Banks, Karla Kuskin, Patricia MacLachlan, Robert Lipsyte, Barbara Robinson, Mollie Hunter, Paul Zindel, and M.B. Goffstein.

In 1998 the annual Charlotte Zolotow Lecture and Award for outstanding writing in a picture book was established by the Cooperative Children's Book Center, a library of the School of Education at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, to honor her talent in writing for young children and her lifelong commitment to excellence in literature for children and young adults. Zolotow said of a good picture book, "it should extend a child's understanding of the world and it must be done from the point of view of the child. It should first of all be a well-written piece of literature, and it should help children understand the world better, their own inner conflicts, their own family, the things closest to them, problems they sometimes think belong only to them."

A remarkable collection of manuscripts, correspondence, and revealing personal material of one of the most important and influential children's book writers and editors of the 20th Century.

A detailed finding aid follows:

Section I. Published Works by Charlotte Zolotow (Boxes 1 - 5)

Zolotow's labeled file folders and alphabetical ordering has been retained (as listed below). Each work is comprised of three or more file folders, variously labeled: "Draft MSS."; "Final MS"; "Correspondence"; "Reviews/Publicity"; "Contracts, Rights, Permissions," etc. Most of the draft manuscripts and final manuscripts are typescripts, the majority of which are annotated and include several working versions. Also included among many of the draft manuscripts are several holographic sheets (containing variant fragments and notes). Several of the final manuscript folders also include additional contemporary versions or later computer-generated versions.

Section II. Poetry, Unpublished Works, and Working Drafts

(Boxes 6 - 9)

Box 6

Autobiographical and Non-Fiction Writings

Zolotow's assorted unpublished writings about her family history, married and social life, children, etc. The writings are notable for her unvarnished and honest view of life, her self-doubts, and continuous self-examination. Included are five versions of her autobiography The Shaded Porch (each about 90pp.): two are typescript copies and three are photo-mechanically reproduced. The earliest typescript dates from circa 1960, and one is annotated in Zolotow's hand. They are accompanied by about a dozen file folders containing brief and multiple-page holograph and typescript writings (prose and verse) dating from the mid-1950s to the late 1990s. Several of these writings have been carefully prepared to capture a fresh moment or thought, while others appear to be hasty efforts to capture fleeting memories of the day's events or a suddenly recalled moment. Included among them are writings labeled: "Very Personal, Destroy Unread at my Death."

Other manuscripts contained in this box include: two non-fiction works from the Face to Face series (A Week in Lateef's World: India, and A Week in Yani's World: Greece); You & Me (later published as Here We Are); and Growing Up Stories, which includes her stories "Say It," "Rachel's Day," and "The Song"; and the anthologies The Big Book of Peace and "The Book of Skies." Each work includes correspondence, rights/permissions, and various original, revised, and final manuscripts.

Box 7

Unpublished Fiction

More than 65 unpublished children's, young adult, and adult stories. The stories date from the mid-1950 to the late 1960s, when Zolotow had established herself as a successful book editor. Each story is contained in its own folder with several versions of the typed manuscript and most with a number of correspondence rejection letters. Some book also have Zolotow's handmade mock-up likely to better envision how the text should flow from page to page; The Color Books contain five such mock-up for each primary color. Also included is a file for The Wind Book that has two unsigned contracts from Macmillan, which Zolotow withdrew from publishing due to the cancelation of their Crowell-Collier Press children's book division.

Box 8

Early Writings

Two folders of holograph and typed manuscripts, approximately 70pp. plus. They consist of a mix of essays, poetry, and short fiction (of about 2 to 5pp. in length). Most are writings from her time as a student the University of Wisconsin (1934-1936), and many are annotated with notes by her teacher Helen C. White.

Story Fragments

Nearly two dozen folders containing ideas, scraps, and fragments of published, unpublished, and abandoned stories. Each folder is filled with assorted typed and holograph sheets of varying sizes from sticky notes, envelopes and index cards to large legal size sheets and notepads with everything from one sentence ideas to partial fleshed-out stories for children's, young adult, and adults. Interspersed are scattered publisher's rejection letters.

Box 9

Unpublished Poetry

A large collection of poetry dating from the early 1950s to the early 2000s, in both holograph and typescript form. Most appears to be unpublished, but due to the profusion of examples and the difficulty in identifying individual poems separate from Zolotow's books, anthology, and magazine appearances, it may include some published works. Interspersed throughout are rejection letters from various publishers.

Section III. Professional and Personal Correspondence, and Related Papers (Boxes 10 – 14A)

House of Harper: Harper & Row, HarperCollins, and Charlotte Zolotow Books: Office Files (Boxes 10-11A)

Zolotow's Harper's office files consists of departmental memoranda (much of it confidential) and correspondence, and miscellaneous working files relating to her editorial and promotional work in the publishing business. Most of the material dates from the 1960s-1990s. It includes Zolotow's correspondence with authors, publishers, and librarians, and internal departmental correspondence with Harper executives and editors, including Brooks Thomas (Chief Executive), Winthrop Knowlton (CEO), and George Craig (Chief Executive of HarperCollins). Among the working files is additional correspondence from Robert Warren (who edited many of Zolotow's books) and others; and several folders relating to Zolotow's winning of the Harper Gold Medal Award for Editorial Excellence (1974), the Cass Canfield Sabbatical in (1981), and the creation of her own imprint. In 1982 Zolotow resigned her position as Vice President and Associate Publisher of Harper Junior Books; and thereafter maintained her office at Harper as Editor of Charlotte Zolotow Books and Editorial Consultant to the Harper Junior Books Department. (Note: Ursula Nordstrom's confidential letters and memos to Zolotow have been removed and filed with the Ursula Nordstrom Letters in box 14 below.)

Boxes 10, 11, and 11A

Ursula Nordstrom: Letters (and related materials): Circa 1943-1986

Over 100 ALS/TLS and 25 Manuscript and Typed Memoranda.

Nordstrom's letters to Charlotte Zolotow consist of informal departmental correspondence, and confidential (work-related and personal) correspondence. Most were typed or handwritten on Harper stationary or notebook sheets. Also included are several handwritten or typed notepad and memoranda sheets. All of Nordstrom's letters address both work-related and personal matters. Everything she writes is of interest: the letters contain numerous references to her ongoing work with several important writers and illustrators (Margaret Wise Brown, Margaret and H.A. Rey, Garth Williams, Maurice Sendak, Meindert DeJong, Louise Fitzhugh, and others). Nordstrom's letters are also notable for her caustic wit and strong opinions: she reveals much about the internal politics at Harper's and the intimate nature of her working relationships with authors and illustrators, and about her personal emotional life and private life with her partner Mary Griffin. Here is a characteristic example from May 16, 1961:

"In a rush, but as I said over the phone Maurice Sendak is now making up a dummy for MR. RABBIT AND THE LITTLE GIRL (and there may WELL be a better title for this book????) and will finish the picture by Sept. 1, 1961, so we can publish in 1962, spring ... Also though Garth Williams has not read LILACS ARE BLUE, (or whatever the title is) he told his wife that he loved all your books and would be able to give time to a new one in the not too distant future. So isn't that FINE???? Two of the best illustrators, I'd say."

They also contain her many unsparing insights into the inner workings of the Department (including office politics and gossip), and of her editorial philosophy:

(June 28, 1955): "I am still blissfully happy that Mick DeJong won the Newberry after all these years and years of work. But there my happiness ceases. The rest is sawdust and sand. None of my activities for too long have had anything to do with books for children. Everything involves the most dreadful sort of arty talk and letters. I feel I am drowning. The worst part, absolutely the worst part, is that I cannot stand myself any more ... I've especially loved my job the past several years because I knew serenely that the delicate feelings of the editor were not at all important, and that if one loved the authors and artists enough there were absolutely no deep problems. No, that doesn't say it right. But I've felt I was operating from a base which was comparatively secure, which I understood. Now I've turned into a perfectly horrid person who thinks unimportant things are important ..."

The letters also reveal the importance of Zolotow as Nordstrom's life-long Confidante, beginning as early as 1944:

[n.d., 1944]: "No news. I had a big fight with Margaret Rey but she just howled with laughter – thought I wasn't serious, and was just being deliciously funny. Most maddening. We were talking about children ... And she said had I ever wanted children and I said yes, but not just anybody's etc. etc. "That Neil's?" she asked and I said yes, he was the only one whose children I really wanted to have ... "Well, you certainly can't do that with a corpse," Margaret said. I needn't tell you how I felt. The thing about someone you love being dead isn't just that you miss them horribly ... I just didn't reply but a couple of days later when I was less shaken I lit into her ... Sheets for THE PARK BOOK will be in next week."

Among the letters are a few from Charlotte to Ursula including this draft of a letter dating from the early 1970s: "Ursula dear, I came back from lunch and can't put out of my mind your discouragement about new management and new people and the sense that no one really understands how this department came about ... you must never feel like this ... I remember the letter Margaret Wise Brown, who will never be surpassed, wrote you YOU the night before she died. Remember it ended with a postscript saying Pain, pain, pain ..."

This collection of Nordstrom's letters and related material roughly divides into four parts (A-D):

A. Nordstrom to Zolotow: Departmental Correspondence (1944-1975)

46 TLS/ALS (most are TLS):

Letters relating to Zolotow's writings (given to Nordstrom for her criticism and consideration for publication: including many of her published and unpublished works), and the current ongoing departmental business at hand. Most of the letters also include references to Nordstrom's and Zolotow's personal affairs and personal relationship, in and out of the office. For example, Nordstrom often refers to Charlotte's husband Maurice, whom she openly admired and was friendly with. Other examples (not quoted above) include:

[1944]: Monday [n.d. – circa April, 1944]: "I sent comp. copies of THE PARK BOOK and PRETZEL to Mrs. Newberry and she just called up to rave about the THE PARK BOOK. She said you are a real poet and what the devil had you been doing just working all these years ..."

[1953]: October 6, 1953: "... I've finally read [Karl] Menniger's quote of Mr. [Maurice] Zolotow and I realize that I've been looking for M. all my life. (Not exactly – I gush, you realize). Seriously, I simply loved what M. wrote and how he wrote it and especially how he thought it, and he can go on voting for Eisenhower if he wants to – I think he is fine." ... "Glad you like IT IS NIGHT [Phyllis Rowand]. It should have been better. But I like it too. I begged Miss Rowand to take out one object and put in a book. All children take books to bed sooner or later ... but she didn't even answer my several letters. I still think having a seal in it is just plain dumb." ... "I saw your Lothrop book ... it is a good story, Charlotte. I like the text better than I did when I saw the manuscript so you and/or Beatrice Creighton are smart ... Don't forget that you were going to send me another manuscript, or tell me your additional ideas for I AM PETER. THE STORM BOOK is selling nicely ..."

B. Nordstrom to Zolotow: Confidential Work-Related/Personal Correspondence (1943-1986)

Over 60 ALS/TLS and about 20 Manuscript/Typed Memoranda

Letters written from home or from when Nordstrom was traveling (on business and vacation). Most are handwritten or typed on notebook sheets or Harper stationary. Other examples (not quoted above) include:

Re: Maurice Sendak:

[1961]: ALS. Folio (8 x 12.25 inches). 2pp. Sunday [n.d. – October 30, 1961]: Dear Charlotte - / [Maurice] Sendak's pictures are so lovely for your (untitled) book! Utterly different from anything he's ever done. ... [This entire letter was published by Leonard Marcus in Dear Genius – (1998)].

Re: Louise Fitzhugh

[1970]: TLS. Folio (8 x 12.25 inches). 1p. November 11, 1970: (Personal from UN) Dearest Charlotte ... what inspires this note is: YOU MUST WRITE IMMEDIATELY, or FIND AMONG YOUR UNFINISHED MANUSCRIPTS, THE PERFECT MANUSCRIPT FOR LOUISE FITZHUGH TO ILLUSTRATE IN FULL COLOR!!!! She can be very funny ... But she also has done haunting paintings ... if you hadn't called my attention to that Fitzhugh unpublishable picture book we would never have drawn HARRIET THE SPY out of Louise. And so you should have the pleasure and honor of having her illustrate your mss with her first color pictures. Please please please take up this challenge ... Louise will be very difficult for any editor to deal with on a picture book, but if the text is by you she will be more reasonable than she would be otherwise. She has great regard for you as a writer, as a person, and she raved about you as an editor to M. Sendak as recently as a year ago."

Note: This letter is accompanied by a TLS from Fitzhugh to Nordstrom: (Quarto. Three typed sheets. December 8, 1970) in which she gives her views of CZ's manuscript.

C. Miscellaneous Correspondence and Biographical Materials

-WHITE, E.B. 1 TLS to Ursula Nordstrom. Quarto. North Brooklin: May 15, 1972: "Dear Ursula: The title for that box of books should be / HERE'S WHITE. BOXED AGAIN! / If I ever get round to that book of my Letters, I'll include that one about our famous Book and Olive luncheon. Hatched 50 praying mantises in our plant room yesterday. I'll bet you haven't got 50 mantises in your home. Mine are all praying for the arrival of aphids. I've never needed aphids so badly in my life. [P.S. in manuscript]: A friend of mine has boxes and boxes of mantises in the refrigerator waiting to hatch" Attached is a carbon copy of Nordstrom's reply, and a photocopy of another E.B. White letter to Nordstrom from October 22, 1952, re: Charlotte's Web.

-NORDSTROM, Ursula. 2 TLS to Maurice Zolotow (January 22 and February 7, 1969).

-[NORSTROM, Ursula and others]: About 50 copies of Nordstrom's letters and memoranda sent to Harper colleagues and to authors (Meindert DeJong, William Pène du Bois, among others); accompanied by a few confidential letters sent to Nordstrom (by Zolotow and others, including a long 14pp. TLS by DeJong sent to Nordstrom in 1962, with Nordstrom's emendations and marginalia.

-GRIFFITH, Mary (Nordstrom's longtime companion). 4 ALS/TLS to Charlotte Zolotow (not dated - written after Nordstrom's death in 1988).

-MARCUS, Leonard S. ALS, TLS, and Autograph Card to Charlotte Zolotow (1993-1996); and accompanying materials (draft correspondence by Zolotow and biographical writings) relating to the compilation of Nordstrom's letters published by Marcus in Dear Genius – The Letters of Ursula Nordstrom (1998).

-[Biographical materials]: Several dozen manuscript notes (on 5" x 7" cards) relating to Nordstrom's life and career (compiled by Charlotte Zolotow and Mary Griffith).

-[Departmental correspondence and memoranda]: One file folder containing letters and memoranda by Charlotte Zolotow, written to Nordstrom and other leading members of the Department, re: the scope and extent of Nordstrom's and Zolotow's responsibilities and authority, and terms of Zolotow's retirement.

-[Clippings]: Miscellaneous articles and ephemera by and about Nordstrom.

-[Book]: In Celebration of the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Harper & Brothers Octavo. Leather over boards with Harper's device stamped in gold on the front board. 16pp., illustrated with photographs. One of 25 copies: The Haddon Craftsmen, Camden, NJ: 1942.

D. Photographs of Ursula Nordstrom (and others)

A collection of 14 black & white prints and 1 color print. Includes two rare early portraits of Nordstrom given to CZ in 1999 from the estate of Mary Griffith. As Nordstrom disliked having her picture taken, very few photographs of her exist.

-1 early (8" x 10") portrait (from the estate of Mary Griffith).

-1 early (4.5" x 6.5") Harper's publicity portrait by Erich Hartmann, mounted on a publisher's mock-up board (from the estate of Mary Griffith).

-3 (8" x 10") informal portraits (including two taken at Harper's).

-5 (5" x 7") prints of Nordstrom at a banquet with Maurice Sendak and Cass Canfield.

-1 (5" x 7") print of Nordstrom at a Harper's meeting.

-2 small portraits.

-1 color print (Nordstrom and Mary?).

-1 black and white print inscribed to Ursula.

Box 14A

Julius H. Jacobs: Personal Correspondence (1974-1985)

Love letters and related correspondence from Julius H. Jacobs (Charlotte Zolotow's brother-in-law and lover). One full box containing about 800 letters (most are ALS with mailing envelopes), including about ten with photographs of Jacobs, his family members, and friends. Also included are a few letters from his wife (Gloria) and others. Jacobs was founder and owner of Visual Arts Opticians (Sylmar and Los Angeles, California) and J.H. Jacobs & Co. Surgical Instruments (NYC). He and CZ maintained an intimate relationship until his death in 1985.

A representative example dated 11/25 [1974]:

Darling,

I received your letter ... it made me sad, introspective and blue. I miss you terribly ... There is so much going on in my head – so much I would like to say to you but in person. Thoughts keep tumbling around. I want to listen to Handel's flute sonatas with you – to throw another log on the fire ... to sun bath with flowers blooming all around me – to drive to New York with you by my side touching your hand – to lean over and kiss you ... to have dinner together – to listen to Cesar Franck – to shower – to go to bed – to watch Upstairs Downstairs – to make love ..."

Four TLS (with ink annotations) from CZ to Julius Jacobs (one is a copy). All four are detailed letters: CZ expounds on the love she shares with JJ, and references notable events and observations. In one letter (apparently not sent, left in its envelope), she goes into detail about her ambivalent feelings about the relationship.

Section IV. Personal Correspondence and Papers (circa 1960s-2010)

Boxes 15 – 15A

Crescent Dragonwagon and Ned Shank Correspondence, circa 1980-2000

Numerous holograph and typed letters, faxes, and post cards sent to Charlotte Zolotow from her daughter, Crescent Dragonwagon and son-in-law, Ned Shank (1956-2000). The messages include updates on progress of the Dairy Hollow House Bed and Breakfast run by the couple, correspondence on various planned events hosted there, as well as personal and business related concerns include their latest books. Among the letters are photographs of Ned's painting and his children's book, a few contentious letters between Zolotow and her daughter, as well as a wealth of more typical friendly messages, often in the form of faxes sent between the two households, often with retained Zolotow originals typically written in green marker. Also included is a printed email from Crescent about Ned's tragic death and a published collections of his writing printed as memorial.

Box 16

Maurice Zolotow Letters, 1967-1990

Over 300 letters from 1967-1990, including an ALS sent a few months before Maurice's death in early 1991. The vast majority are TLS, along with roughly 30 TN and Cards Signed. Most of the TLS are two pages in length and single spaced, though lengthier examples are not uncommon with about half a dozen upwards of eight pages. About 30 letters and cards are paper clipped or stapled to newspaper or magazine clippings that he felt Charlotte should read, as was his habit. The letters begin in the late 1960s as their marriage was breaking down, through their divorce in 1969, and to the end of Maurice's life. Many of the early letters are tense and accusatory, with Maurice responding to Charlotte's comments and the dredging up of numerous marital difficulties. The letters take an about face just a few years later, when Maurice was living in California, with many addressing Charlotte as: "My love," "Darling," and "Chere." They remained close friends and in constant contact until Maurice's death. A compelling correspondence between two ambitious writers. Also included are numerous sympathy cards Charlotte received after his death, and a small folder of miscellaneous family letters, including several from her father in the late 1960s, and a 1955 letter from Maurice's father Harry Zolotow (who has nice things to say about Charlotte and her book: The Storm Book).

Boxes 17 – 18

Lectures and Speeches on Writing Children's Books (1967-1986)

30 folders, two binders, and roughly 500 index cards; correspondence and manuscripts of lectures and speeches given by Zolotow at various seminars, workshops, conferences, and universities (Princeton, Stanford, Columbia, University of Cincinnati, etc.); also correspondence and manuscript for an article published in Writer's Digest in 1969. The index cards contain both holograph and typed notes.

Box 19

Fan letters (1967-2002)

Hundreds of letters from children, teachers, and adults, several with drawings, a few photographs, plus dozens of hand-drawn cards and pictures, and including a half dozen kid-created dust jackets for several of Zolotow's books. Many include carbon copies of Zolotow's responses or notes asking an assistant to send along a brochure or a copy of a book.

Box 20

Later Biographical Materials and Awards

Material documenting Zolotow's professional life; a typescript copy of an interview with Zolotow conducted by writer Leonard S. Marcus; several folders containing brochures and bibliographies about Zolotow; various magazine clippings about her career; several folders of correspondence and promotional material related to the Zolotow Award given out by the University of Wisconsin; and a complete printout of Zolotow's website as it appeared on July 25, 2000.

Box 21

Early Professional Life and Personal Biographical Material

Material related to Zolotow's personal life and family. Included are two versions of a 1981 master's thesis by Karen Lenz Chapman (approximately 79pp. each) comparing the themes in Zolotow's book with her adult development with revealing detail about her personal history; a folder of cards and letters related to the death of Zolotow's mother, Ella F. Shapiro (1888-1968), and father Louis J. Shapiro (1883-1968), who died a little over two months apart; two copies of the will of Dorothy Arnof, Zolotow's sister; and various folders reviews and press clippings, including Zolotow's New York Times obituary and three of her passports.

Box 22

The Writers' Colony at Dairy Hollow (WCDH)

Brochures, newsletters, and publicity material related to the operation of The Writers' Colony at Dairy Hollow: Crescent Dragonwagon's and Ned Shank's unique bed and breakfast and residency program for writers, artists, composers, architects, and chefs, located in Eureka Springs, Arkansas. Included are various magazines, newspaper clippings, and tear sheets featuring articles on the Colony and the surrounding area.

Box 23

Personal Papers

Family Documents:

- Birth Certificates: “Gertrude Charlotte Shapiro ... St. Christopher’s Hosp. Norfolk [VA]”; for Maurice: “City of New York ... November 23, 1913”; [copy]: for Stephen Zolotow, 1945.
- High School Diploma (1933): The Riverdale School.
- [telegrams]: wedding congratulations sent to Charlotte’s parents, 1904.
- Wedding invitation (Charlotte’s sister Dorothy, 1934).
- Death Certificate (Charlotte’s father, 1968).
- Divorce Papers (from Maurice, 1969).
- Draft copies of Charlotte’s Will (2001).

Miscellaneous Family papers: relating to Zolotow’s everyday life such as home repairs and cleaning directions, a list of household possessions, assorted travel plans, a file documenting a car accident, two larger mailers with addresses and another of Christmas cards.

Box 24

Miscellaneous

Several Harper & Row and HarperCollins annual reports, catalogs, employee handbooks, etc.; a file of Zolotow’s travel brochures and maps of various countries; random mailers, magazines, and clippings.

Box 25

Planners, Address Books, and Selected Works (in multi-media formats)

- Twelve annual planners (1975, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, two from 1986, 1994, 2000, and 2001), ranging in size from 32mo to quarto: five are red leatherette planners with Zolotow’s initials in gilt on the front, the remainder are mass market planners. All are filled-in with daily activities, appointments, birthdays, anniversaries, and notes.
- Five address books (1960-2000), ranging in size from 24mo to quarto, containing several typed but mostly handwritten contact names, addresses, and telephone numbers of professional colleagues, writers and artists, as well as family and friends.
- Rolodex: one plastic box full of index cards, along with a binder with contact information and telephone numbers.
- Two audio books: If You Listen (1990) and Wake Up and Goodnight, read by Kate Nelligan and Marsha Mason.
- Two VHS tapes: Quarreling Book (Advance American Communications, 1989); and Read to Me (Teachers & Writers Collaborative in New York, 2000).
- Filmstrip of: A Father Like That with brochure and cassette tape.
- Filmstrip typescript of: The Grower featuring Zolotow gardening, with accompanying correspondence.

Box 27

[Large manila folder and Shoebox]: Assorted Black & White Prints

More than 400 photos ranging in size from 1.5” x 2” to 16”x 20”. The images are a mix of both amateur and professional photographs of Zolotow as editor and publisher, and at home gardening, entertaining, or relaxing with family. The earliest images include large 16” x 20” portraits, and several prints of Zolotow’s parents and Charlotte Zolotow and her sister Dorothy as children and teenagers. The majority of the remaining images feature Zolotow as a new parent, and young children’s book author and editor, including a few later and larger professionally taken portraits. Other highlights include a published photo of Zolotow with her son Steve (along with a contact sheet), and several publicity shots of Zolotow with the French mime Marcel Marceau, and speaking about children’s books on a panel seated between Maurice Sendak and Theodor Geisel.

[Large manila folder and Shoebox]: Assorted Color Prints

About 700 photographs measuring 2.5” x 3.5” to 11” x 14”. The images are a mix of both amateur and professional photographs of Zolotow as editor and in her private life, with most dating from the late 1970s to the early 2000s, when she was still an active writer. Nearly half are snapshots taken at a special reception for Zolotow held in 1990 at the New York Public Library: “in recognition of 52 years as distinguished editor, publisher, and writer”; with an accompanying sign-in book. The remainder are private in nature, capturing Zolotow with family, friends, and neighbors, as well as some assorted travel, garden, and home renovations images. Included is a print of Maurice Zolotow at a barbecue with the actor Kevin McCarthy and his wife actress Augusta Dabney, and three large prints of CZ and CD at a book signing in Arkansas, circa 1973.

[Shoebox]: Slides

500 color slides. 1967-1972. Stored in original Kodak slide boxes. Various images of the Zolotow family, their garden, Halloween decorations, sights around Hastings-on-Hudson and New York City, including The Guggenheim Museum and East Village street life. Also slides of Crescent in Arkansas in 1972 as well as travel images from Santa Monica, California, Hawaii, and the desert. Included is a slide viewer (circa 1970s).

Portfolio: Oversize Photographs

Eight 11” x 14” prints (7 black & white, 1 color); and one contact sheet. Portraits of CZ by Andrew Kilgore; outdoor print of CZ and MZ by Feingersh; outdoor print of CZ and Frank Sciascia in front of Riverrun Bookstore (May, 1987); one portrait of CD.
