[Photo Album]: Guam and Marshall Islands

Guam and Marshall Islands: late 1920s

$600

Oblong quarto. String-tied black leather over paper boards measuring 10½" x 14" with a stamped design and "Album" on the front board. Contains 26 black and white and handcolored photographs measuring between 3½" x 3" and 7" x 9" affixed to stiff black paper with some captions.

A photo album of Guam and the Marshall Islands taken in the late 1920s. The photos include full page, hand colored images of palm tree lined dirt roads and beaches. One of the handcolored photo shows a scene of a beach with an islander walking passed a boat to a thatched house in the distance. There are photos of “Royal Palm Drive” and the ruins of Plaza de España, the Governor’s Palace, in Guam which was used during the Spanish occupation. Lloyd Stowell Shapley, the American born Navy officer who served as governor of Guam from 1926 until 1929, is seen here with his wife. Another photo shows natives on a donkey, another shows a man holding an armful of pineapples, and another shows young boys riding on oxen. There are two photos showing a political assembly with a color guard. The album concludes with a photo of the moon over the ocean.

A modest but beautifully presented collection of photographs from the South Pacific in the 1920s. [BTC#400040]
