is titled, "The Desert - California," the Golden Gate Bridge titled, "At Dusk - San Francisco," and a beach titled "Lapping Waves - Sebago Lake, Maine." The album continues with a fisherman in a photo called "The Canoe" taken in Canada, ducklings in Saint Petersburg, Florida titled, "Just Born," and glaciers in Alaska titled, "Gold, Gold!" Although most of Dunbar's photography focuses on nature there are a few portraits throughout his journeys. One entitled, "Heap Big Chief" of a Native American in a headdress in Glacier and a native Alaskan he called "The Bride." All the photos show someone honing their photography skills and attempting to develop their eye.

A wonderful collection of amateur photography displaying the natural beauty and people of the United States.
