Feast of the Transfiguration - 1912

A photo album of Evergreen, Colorado in 1912. Although modest in number the photos are better than usual amateur attempts at capturing the natural beauty of the landscape. Pictured are the road to "Camp Neosha," a private mountain retreat for the Williams-Douglas family, Bear Creek, and Bear Mountain. One particularly nice image is from the point of view of looking down on the town of Evergreen showing the creeks, cabins, and numerous trees of the valley. Another photo shows a young girl on horseback in a field with Kinney's Peak in the background. The only indoor photograph is of a chapel during the Feast of the Transfiguration which shows an empty church from the entrance looking in over rows of pews towards the alter. A modest but interesting collection of amateur photographs of Colorado. [BTC#401248]
