

Alexander Thomas

Many a Night's Journey

New York: Comet Press Books (1957)

$375

First edition. Slightest rubbing or sunning on edges of the spine, else about fine in nice, very good dustwrapper with long but close tear on the front panel and a little soiling. A vanity press book, part autobiography, part fantasy, an account of the Depression and World War Two by an African-American from St. Kitts, living in New York.

Uncommon. [\[BTC#411487\]](#)

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Alexander Thomas was born on the island of St. Kitts, the British West Indies, in 1909.

Educated in the government schools there, he migrated to the United States and made his home in Boston and New York.

A song composer, writer, and playwright, he has written and published several songs: "A Dream Comes True," "Darling, If You'll Only Believe Me," "So Easy on the Eye," and "The United Nations' Theme Song."

Employed by the Robert Hall Clothes Company of New York, he has contributed to the company newspaper, "The Robert Hall Pipeline."

He now makes his home in New York City.
