Poster on printed cardstock with applied halftone relief photograph. 14½" x 19½". Modest soiling and tiny stains, very near fine. Large central image of comedian Fred Mace in baseball cap, the short film was issued as "The Baseball Umpire" in 1913 with Mace and Marguerite Marsh, on the same reel with another short from the Majestic Motion Picture Company, "An Aesthetic Match." Mace was a dentist from Pennsylvania who gained film success with Mack Sennett as the Police Chief of The Keystone Cops. The Majestic Motion Picture Company, based in Jacksonville, Florida was a shortlived but important company that produced nearly 500 films between 1912 and 1917. [BTC#420424]
