

Mildred J. Loomis

The Green Revolution: For Homesteaders, On-To-The-Landers, and Do-It-Yourselfers: 61 loose issues, 1963-73

Brookville, Ohio: School of Living 1963-73

$800

Tabloid newspaper. A collection of 61 loose issues, comprising a complete run of the first volume: Vol. 1, Nos. 1-12 (January – December, 1963) and additional loose and related material as described below.

Edited by Mildred J. Loomis, sometimes called the “Grandmother of the Counter-Culture,” The Green Revolution was one of the official organs of Ralph Borsodi’s traveling utopian experiment The School Of Living, which promoted Borsodi’s and Loomis’s ideals of modern homesteading, family-farming, and decentralized culture. Started in 1936, The School of Living was relocated to the Loomis homestead at Brookville, Ohio in 1945, where she also served for nearly 40 years as the School’s Director.

A scarce collection of early issues, an important precursor to the “back-to-the-land” movement of the Sixties and Seventies.

An inventory of all 61 issues and the additional material follows on the next page.

12 consecutive issues: Vol. 1, Nos. 1-12 (January – December, 1963).

49 non-consecutive loose issues from 1964 through 1973: Vol. 2 (1964), nos. 1,2,4,9,10,12; Vol. 3 (1965), nos. 1-5; Vol. 4 (1966), nos. 5-12; Vol. 5 (1967), no. 5; Vol. 6 (1968), nos. 1,2,4,5,8,9; Vol. 7 (1969), no. 12; Vol. 8, nos. 1-10; Vol. 8, no.12/Vol. 9, no.1 (combined issue); Vol. 9

(1971), nos. 4,5,8,9,12; + seven irregularly numbered issues: June 1971 (2 copies); October 1972; January, March-April, May, June, July-August, 1973. Folios, folded (1963-71), and stapled quartos (1972-73).

With a subscriber's mailing address typed direct or on a paper label. Age browning and scattered chipping along the horizontal center folds and to the corners, brittle and fair to good only. Also included is a mimeographed supplement:

"School of Living, July 1973," a loose 2pp. mimeographed issue of Green Egg, Read It, Dammit (Vol. 3, No. 22 [1970]), and four loose "School of Living" circular letters stapled together (1970-73).

[BTC#422462]