LEATHER LUNGS

JOSEPH A. MARSHALL,
LIEUT. RET.

This is the story of the part played by Afro-Americans who were proud to have represented their heritage while participating in the history of America. It is an exciting documentary of the experiences of Engine Eleven's crew as they rescued lives threatened by fire and as they sometimes lost the fight against the ravages of flames in old and poorly constructed buildings.

This is an informative book, full of interesting episodes in the everyday life of those whose profession is among the most dangerous—incidents sometimes amusing and sometimes tragic.

An intimate account highlighting the heroic pioneer Afro-American members of Philadelphia's Engine Company Eleven. Photographically illustrated.
